

Rich Mendez

Project headline: NYCHA Residents Demand Public Housing be Fully Funded

Map: Shows how many PACT developments there are in each borough. The tooltip shows how many have been completed and how many are in progress.

Data: I got my data from the NYCHA website. Specifically here and here. I counted up each dot on the interactive map for my excel data, with blue dots being completed PACT developments, and orange dots being PACT developments that are in progress.

I originally was going to include the number of NYCHA tenants but I figured it would just look like a population map if I did that. Whereas the PACT housing map isn't as much of a population map, with only 1 development in the very populated Queens borough.

Webpage: I picked a plain background color and a blue text to match my map. The photo is a photo I took when covering the rally led by Tamika Mapp. I interviewed her for the quote at the bottom of the page.

Challenges: I had a hard time centering with css even though I know I get points off for using center html tags.